WHERE SLEEP THE BRAVE

Exercises Today at Arlington, the Soldiers

eteries-Ladies and Children Join in the

Tribute to the Dead-The G. A. R. Parade

Let the lilies fall On them all,

The true and the brave, In a sacred grave-The Nation's dead! The roses red, And the violets white And blue, For the right And the true! The living, Of the land, Forgiving The erring; and

Forgetting the dread, dark days Of those frightful frays, When brother fought brother, And the noble Mother Agonized through the four fierce years Of blood and tears

And sorrow: Forgetting, in the new tomorrow, That has come from the past, To last,

Let us pray, Till Judgment Day! From the night Has come a softer light; And the tears and pain Were not in vain.

Our grief is one,

And the North and the South, With wet eyes and quivering mouth, Unmindful of what was done, And of its cost, Weep at the graves of their loved and lost.

Over them all, the living and dead, One flag floats; and free, Is the land from sea to sea, And glorious!

The blood that was shed, Victorious, Not over each side, But over the pride And hate, that dwelt In each, and was felt, Until these sons died; And side by side, As they sleep,

We weep, And, we rejoice, that they Have made our country one, today.

THE PROCESSION.

MILITARY UNIwith the blue and brass buttoned garb of the Grand Army in the crowd that collected about Grand Army head quarters opposite Willard's Hotel this morning. This was the starting point of the procession that left for Arlington at 10 o'clock.

An Increase in the Public Dest.—The May debt statement to be issued Monday will show an apparent increase of $250,000 in the debt since the 1st instant. This is due to the fact that the disbursements during the month were unusually large, leaving less money in the treasury May 29 by about the amount stated available for the payment of the debt. The pension payments were $8,500,000, leaving oration days, but who were now sleeping their last sleep, and as they looked upon the ranks now being thinned out by death they realized that the days of the veterans of the war were fast running out.

MORE INTEREST THAN PORMERLY. Some of the older members of the Grand growing interest which is taken in the observgrowing interest which is taken in the observance of the day and they feel that while the active participants in the war are fast disappearing, their fame and their deeds commemorated in this celebration will continue to be held in reverence by those who are coming up to take their places. They say that the observance of the day is, if anything, more claborate than it used to be. Certainly the fine procession which formed on Pennsylvania avenue near 15th street today and marched to the bridge at Georgetown was a creditable display.

was connected for short time with the staff of The Evening Star. He was also with the Washington staff of the New York Herald and associate editor of the Interior Department and then was transferred to the eastern division of the pension office, where he is still employed. In his duties of the day he was assisted by Chief Aide Jas. E. McCabe, Additional Aid T. W. Tallmadge and Officer of the Guard Lieut. S. M. Gordon.
